Choosing the Right Flowers

The first step in creating floral jewelry is choosing the right flowers. Not all flowers are created equal when it comes to jewelry making. Some flowers, like roses, have petals that are too delicate and will easily wilt. Others, like sunflowers, have petals that are too large and will overwhelm your jewelry design.

When choosing flowers for jewelry making, look for flowers with petals that are relatively thick and sturdy. These petals will be less likely to wilt or tear, and they will hold their shape better when preserved. Some good choices for floral jewelry include:

- Roses
- Peonies
- Hydrangeas
- Lilies
- Carnations
- Violets
- Pansies

Preserving Your Flowers

Once you've chosen your flowers, you'll need to preserve them so that they will last for years to come. There are a few different ways to preserve flowers, but the most common method is to dry them. To dry your flowers, simply spread them out on a baking sheet and place them in a warm, dry place. You can also dry your flowers in a food dehydrator.

Once your flowers are dry, you can use them to create your jewelry. You can glue them onto metal findings, wire them together, or even embed them in resin. With a little creativity, you can create beautiful and unique floral jewelry that will be treasured for years to come.

Creating Floral Rings

Floral rings are a beautiful and easy way to add a touch of nature to your style. To create a floral ring, you will need:

- A metal ring blank
- Dried flowers
- Clear epoxy resin
- A stirring stick
- A disposable cup

To make a floral ring, simply follow these steps:

1. Start by gluing your dried flowers onto the metal ring blank. Use a clear epoxy resin to secure the flowers in place. 2. Once the flowers are glued in place, pour a thin layer of clear epoxy resin over the top of the ring. Use a stirring stick to mix the resin thoroughly. 3. Allow the resin to cure for 24 hours. Once the resin is cured, your floral ring is complete.
