About the Book

Meegook Dry Bones is a gripping historical novel about a Korean American family in Los Angeles during the 1970s and 1980s. The novel follows the family as they navigate the challenges of immigration, racism, and violence.

The novel begins in 1976, when the Park family arrives in Los Angeles from South Korea. The family is headed by Mr. Park, a hard-working businessman, and Mrs. Park, a devoted wife and mother. The Parks have two children, Sunny and David.

The family quickly settles into their new life in Los Angeles. Mr. Park finds a job as a janitor, and Mrs. Park stays home to take care of the children. Sunny and David attend school and make friends.

However, the Parks' American dream is soon threatened by racism. The family is subjected to verbal and physical abuse from their neighbors and classmates. Mr. Park is fired from his job, and the family is forced to move to a rundown apartment in Koreatown.

Despite the challenges they face, the Parks refuse to give up on their dream. They work hard to rebuild their lives and to make a better future for themselves and their children.
