The Work Of Carolyn Ellis

Carolyn Ellis is a professor of communication at the University of South Florida. She is the author of numerous books and articles on qualitative research, including the seminal work Autoethnography: Personal Narrative, Reflexivity, and Identity.

Ellis's work is characterized by its focus on the personal experience as a source of data for research. She argues that researchers can gain a deeper understanding of the human experience by examining their own lives and experiences, as well as the lives and experiences of others.

Ellis's work has had a major impact on the field of qualitative research. She has helped to legitimize the use of personal experience as data, and she has developed a number of innovative research methods, such as autoethnography and narrative analysis.

The Work Of Arthur Bochner

Arthur Bochner is a professor of communication at the University of California, Santa Barbara. He is the author of numerous books and articles on qualitative research, including the seminal work Interpretive Practice: Construing, Deconstructing, and Reconstructing Self and Others.

Bochner's work is characterized by its focus on the interpretive nature of human communication. He argues that people make sense of the world through the stories they tell about themselves and others, and that these stories are constantly being shaped and reshaped by the social and cultural context in which they are told.

Bochner's work has had a major impact on the field of qualitative research. He has helped to develop a more sophisticated understanding of the role of interpretation in human communication, and he has developed a number of innovative research methods, such as grounded theory and narrative analysis.
