Quotations from the Founders on Religion

- "Religion is the only solid basis of government." - George Washington

- "The government of the United States is not in any sense founded on the Christian religion." - Thomas Jefferson
- "Religious freedom is a fundamental right." - James Madison
- "Let us forbear to set up a religion that has nothing to do with our civil institutions." - Benjamin Franklin
- "The preservation of the sacred fire of liberty, and the destiny of the Republican model of government, are justly considered as deeply, perhaps as finally staked, on the experiment entrusted to the hands of the American people." - George Washington

The Founders' Views on Religion

The Founders' views on religion were complex and varied. Some of them were devout Christians, while others were more skeptical of organized religion. However, all of them recognized the importance of religion in shaping American society.

The Founders believed that religion was a private matter between an individual and God. They also believed that the government should not interfere with the free exercise of religion.

The Founders' views on religion have had a lasting impact on American society. The United States is a country with a strong tradition of religious freedom. The government does not endorse any particular religion, and people are free to practice their own faith without fear of persecution.
